UW-Madison Shelter Medicine Northern Tier Shelter Fellowship Program

Written By: Lexi Woodworth, Shelter Director

Earlier this year I was accepted into the UW-Madison Shelter Medicine Northern Tier Fellowship Program. This program gathers shelter directors from several states that border Canada. The fellowship is run by a group of veterinarians dedicated to improving animal welfare in shelters. As stated on their website 'The UW Northern Tier Shelter Fellowship Program was created to provide shelter leadership staff with additional training to help them deliver life-saving knowledge and services to our nation's communities and animals in need of care. This program is modeled after the highly successful Maddie's UW/UCD Shelter Medicine Veterinary Fellowship for shelter veterinarians. Up to two staff in leadership roles per shelter are invited to participate.'

The fellowship consists of a four day camp, bi-weekly meetings, and continuous support from their team and fellows. My goals when applying for fellowship was to create a network of peers in the animal welfare community and to have an open mind to new ideas. Fast Forward to the end of camp and I have a notebook full of ideas to make OAHS even better. I am excited to continue to move OAHS forward and align with the industry's best practices. The first projects we are taking on focus on animal housing and our foster program. Stay tuned to our social media and website for changes over the coming months.
